What does it mean to spend a day in the life of a student? Because of Lipscomb's diversity and its Christian emphasis, one day can mean many different things. For a biology student, it can mean learning with professors and fellow students during an experiment. For art students, one day could be painting or sculpting a figure in one of the pottery laboratories. For English students, it can mean studying some of the most important literature of our time with talented and enthusiastic faculty members. In all of the disciplines, the professors and staff try to develop each student's talents so that he can then study independently. By their example, they teach their students a little more about what it means to live out one's faith. A day in the life of any student holds the possibility of being challenged with new thoughts and moving from being a listener to being a leader. With Lipscomb's focus on Christian service and academic excellence, a day has unlimited possibilities.

Nate's 'Biocature'

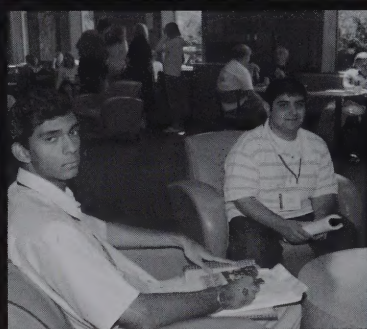

Born on the west side of Queens in 1982, Nate Creekmore was adopted by a family of Norwegians and raised as a white child. Later in his life, he discovered his ethnic ancestry and began to reach out to his African American roots. Because he was alienated from his true culture for such a long period of time, many of its elements were foreign to him. After a traumatic break dancing accident, Nate discovered the joy of drawing and used the recovery period to focus on developing an artistic style of his own. He has been producing works of art ever since. --Nate August begins as students meet friends and begin to realize that 8 a.m. really is that early. Courses start while students adjust to life on campus for the first time or begin another year at Lipscomb. There are clubs to join, movie nights to attend, and hours to be spent talking about nothing. Then as those sultry August days evaporate into the cool autumn evenings, students realize how time passes with the start of mid-term examinations. But fall also brings hayrides, camp-outs, and hikes at near-by Radnor Lake. Then that cool autumn breeze chills into winter's first frost as students complete the semester. With the change in the season, everyone enjoys cups of hot coffee from Jazzman's. The campus is decorated with festive wreathes as the campus glows in its newly found lights. With the mad dash to finals, another semester is finished but its memories will be captured in everyone's minds.

Move In Days

At the beginning of each year, family, friends, and faculty members help students move into the dorm rooms. Computers, disks, microwaves, extra blankets sneaked in by mom, and treasured boxes of personal pictures are hauled in. These boxes are sure to include the important local list of the fast-food restaurants which will come in handy when they begin their college experience. Parents wistfully watch their sons and daughters move into another chapter of their lives. Students, however, seem to quickly adjust in their once-again found freedom. And, into the arms of Lipscomb University, they can begin to fulfill their ambitions and to realize their dreams.

(Right) Move in day would not be as successful without the help of our faculty and staff. Thanks for all your help Dr. Fred Gilliam.

(Right) President Steve Flatt like many faculty and staff helps Johnson Hall residents move into the dorm by carrying boxes, clothes, and electronics into the dorms.

(Above) Families often come with their students to assist with the moving process.

Johnson

Deborah Chapman,
Head Resident

With the new edition completed, Johnson now houses twice the number of residents and offers spacious new rooms to incoming or returning students. The study rooms offer students places in which to study, to read, or to do group projects. Even though it has doubled in size and employs seven Resident Assistants, Johnson girls have a strong sense of unity. To achieve this cohesiveness, many parties and get-togethers are scheduled throughout the year. "The diversity and talent of each girl is what makes Johnson such a special place for me," says Deborah Chapman, Head Resident.

Elam is a prime place in which to live for Lipscomb's female students. Because of its closeness to the Student Center, the Elam lobby is a great place to see familiar faces. The open courtyard, aerobics room, and full-service kitchen provide many opportunities for residents. Elam builds a sense of community by having hall devotionals, movie nights, and annual cookouts. All of this activity makes Elam the largest girl's dormitory by housing approximately 340 women.

Fanning is perhaps the most distinct of the three girls' dormitories. The rooms are arranged into suites as opposed to the conventional plan which places a series of rooms down one hall. This closeness allows the girls to better know one another. In Fanning, each suite houses eight women and contains a living area along with a bathroom. One of the dorm's favorite activities is the RA dinner when the RA's prepare a special meal for the Fanning ladies.

Housing approximately 160 men, Sewell Hall is Lipscomb's smallest dormitory. This atmosphere provides a unique experience for all of its residents. Each year, these students enjoy events like white-water rafting, movie nights, cook-outs, and service projects. The lobby provides a perfect place to play pool or table tennis. Conveniently located near the Student Center, Sewell Hall is a great place to visit friends.

Rising above the other buildings on campus, High Rise is the largest and tallest Lipscomb building. While each dormitory has its defining aspect, High Rise also has the distinction of having a Movie Room and a game center. Altogether, it boards around 350 men each semester and employs 16 Resident assistants. Sam Parnell and Mike Smith who serve the dorm provide a deep sense of community in High Rise.

In the pursuit of providing the greatest opportunity for freshmen to be comfortable with Lipscomb's setting, the Campus Life Office seeks exceptional students who are already enrolled at Lipscomb to construct activities for new freshmen to enjoy. In order to accomplish this purpose, Advance is a program which helps freshmen sign-up for classes, meet some of the faculty, and buy their books. Quest, however, is an opportunity to simply have fun! At the school year's beginning, the Quest team shows a movie at Bison Square, invites a visiting artist to speak, and provides more chances to make new friends. Under the guidance of Associate Dean of Campus Life, Sarah Keith Gamble, these programs have proven to be both helpful and engaging.

Open Dorm

Open dorm, held every Thursday evening, allows students another opportunity in which to get to know other people on campus outside of the classroom environment. During open dorm, people enjoy seeing how their friends live and getting to know a little more about who they are.

Chapel and University Bible

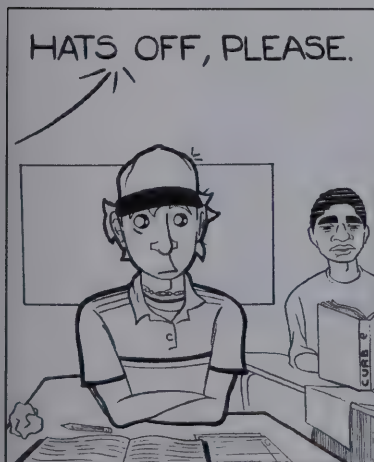

In Lipscomb's mission to incorporate Christian discipline into every day life, a time is set each day to reflect, to learn, and to pray. On Monday's, Wednesday's, and Friday's, each student must take a Bible class and must attend chapel. On Tuesday's and Thursday's, each student who attends classes on those days must go to University Bible (UB). This time spent together has proven to be enjoyable and has been much needed on campus. Students, during this time, hear from speakers who range from students to visitors, faculty, and staff. These visitors offer their reflections on the word of God, their own experiences, and their interactions with other believers. Both chapel and UB ensure a sense of community in the student body and underscores the goal of "Lighting the Way."

Dean of the College of Bible

The College of Bible and Ministry seeks to challenge students to follow Christ's example. Through daily teaching and Bible studies, both faculty members and students are encouraged to think about truth which is presented in scripture. One's perspective can change from living by society's ideas to living according to the radically different ideas of Christ. The entire Lipscomb family is then continually called to better serve one another. With this emphasis on Christian education, graduates of all disciplines can better serve society. David Lipscomb once wrote, "Teaching the word of God is made an essential part, indeed, of the essence of the Christian religion." Lipscomb's desire to see Christians seek a better understanding is being reached with this focus.

Dr. Val Prill
Dean of the College of Arts and Humanities

Because of the need to be continually challenged both intellectually and spiritually, the College of Arts and Humanities is committed to presenting students with diverse courses of study. Departments such as the English, Foreign Language, Art, Music, Theatre, and History, Politics, and Philosophy, seek to instill a love of wisdom and scholarship. With this background, students are better prepared to serve their community. They also are well-prepared to meet the challenges that they face since many of these alumni pursue graduate studies.

Dr. Ben Hutchinson
and Applied Sciences

Comprised of the Departments of Biology, Chemistry, Computing and Information Systems, Mathematics, Psychology, and the Raymond B. Jones School of Engineering, the College of Natural and Applied Sciences seeks to prepare students for professional studies and to incorporate principles of the Christian faith. By providing a solid foundation within their discipline, the faculty also provides a better understanding of the orderliness and complexities of the created universe. Students are then better prepared to enter graduate work or the medical and allied health studies.

Nursing Program

This year marks the beginning of Lipscomb's Nursing Program. Through a partnership with Vanderbilt University, students are able to learn some of the most advanced medical practices and are able to study with some professors who are at the forefront of their field. With this intense focus, Lipscomb nursing majors will then combine a broad knowledge of patient care along with a Christ-centered education in order to better serve.

The College of Business seeks to provide students with a common body of business administration knowledge accompanied by specific business skills which are essential in tomorrow's workplace. It also desires to prepare students to deal with work and personal situations in an ethical and Christian manner. The academic programs consist of a broad liberal arts component, followed by the business core, and ending with specialized courses in accounting, finance, economics, and management. This college is committed to fostering relationships with the business community and encouraging exchanges among students and businesses.

Linda Jones

Illustrating Service to Students:

Remembering Linda Jones and Billy Moore

With thirty-three years of service combined, we express our deepest sympathy to the families of Linda Jones who died on March 13, 2005 and Billy Moore who died on August 30, 2004, for their dedication to the Lipscomb Dining Services and to Lipscomb Students.

"Linda started at Lipscomb on August 21, 1986. She was a great employee and had a servant, caring heart for the students at LU. She was always thinking of the students and would 'ring my ears' on anything she thought we could do for the students. She was a great advocate for the students and we loved that about her," said Rick Graham, Lipscomb Dining Services Manager.

Billy Moore began his time at Lipscomb in 1980. He was a dedicated employee that worked hard to make everyone feel like they were his first priority when he was serving them. His very unique laugh could be heard from across the room and that is one way he will be remembered. The students that were especially close to him, looked for his wonderful sense of humor to brighten their day. His willingness to serve the University for these fourteen years says great things about his character.

Commenting on the death of these two friends and co-workers, Graham observed. "I have only had two employees in my twenty-five years pass away and they have both been this school year. We will miss them both professionally and personally."

Archegos Picnic & Volleyball

The evening kicks off as these ladies enjoy the evening

Hangin' out at the bell tower while eating an awesome meal these Archegos members get to know each other better.

We Love ARCHEGOS!!!

We're meeting friends at this year's event.

Summer Wiser and friend wait for the food to be served at tonight's event.

Smile everyone!

Rush Fair

Rush Fair provides students a wonderful opportunity to get to know one another as well as to get to know the social clubs on campus. The Lipscomb Rush Fair along with the social club experience illustrates yet another way in which community is built on campus between students and alumni.

(Left) The men of Sigma Iota Delta set up their table. Each club provides a booth for all to come by and see what their club is all about.

Brandon Rosenthal continues to help the Lady Bison's volleyball team improve and refine their skills as athletes during his second year of head coaching. This year the team achieved with a 9-19 record.

Rosenthal, who was a theatre major at Pepperdine University, has proven to have as much talent in volleyball coaching as he had on the stage. Also adding to the interesting mix, the Lady Bison team members come from all over the country, making the team one of the most diverse groups on campus.

The team looks forward to next season and to the opportunity for continued improving.

The Archegos program is a great opportunity for freshmen to get to know other people around campus. By having fun activities, these students learn more about what it means to be a part of the Lipscomb community and to learn more about general campus happenings. The students who stay with their Archegos or social club then provide valuable support as they take on more leadership roles. This social-club experience provides these participants with life-long friends and a different taste of what it means to be a Bison.

International Square Fair

Every year, Lipscomb students enjoy getting to see different global perspectives. This year's fair was one of the most well-attended events. Both the Lipscomb community and the community from areas adjacent to campus were welcomed into Bison Square. Peru, Jamaica, Honduras, and Germany were among some of the countries represented. During lunch, students listened to Bluegrass music and saw traditional Celtic dances.

november • dec

A chill runs through the November air as students bundle in their winter coats. They then realize that Nashville only reaches a balmy 40 degrees on most winter days and don other apparel. Students, amidst the fun that accompanies attending formals and hay rides, soon remember that finals, projects, and a host of other assignments are due. As hours tick off of the clock, intentions of "staying up late" quickly become ideas of "going to bed tomorrow." Semesters don't end: they spin wildly out of control dumping people at Christmas Break. With a little more sleep, students, returning to campus, begin that time-honored tradition of starting another semester.

Earnest in Love

"Earnest in Love" is based on Oscar Wilde's play about social hypocrisy of Victorian England. Two young gentlemen well-versed in the art of "Bunburying" (i.e., using a fictitious relative as an alibi to circumvent the responsibilities of proper social behavior) are beside themselves when they find their innocent fabrications taking over their love lives.

One of the best opportunities afforded to Lipscomb students is the opportunity to travel abroad. The Lipscomb in Vienna program gives people this chance to see Europe and more of the Western Hemisphere as they study in one of the world's most culturally rich cities. For three months, these students are bathed in a global heritage. They can visit many historically important sites since Vienna and her sister cities are replete with historical happenings. Students, using these cities as a base, can see where the Allied forces fought off the Nazi regime and can visit where the crowned heads of France established their monarchies. On the weekends, the Eiffel Tower and other Paris hot spots can be seen.

The most important thing these scholars bring back from their travel—a broad experience is a new perspective. They now perceive the world to be a diverse and more complex place than what was originally thought. With this outlook, they can better relate to a broader range of people and can better handle situations which require a well-rounded outlook.

Bison Basketball

The men's basketball team had a riveting season since they won several hard-fought games against top-ranked schools. One of those games was the Battle of the Boulevard when Lipscomb knocked off top-seated Belmont with only seconds left on the clock. Head Coach Scott Sanderson continued to lead the team with the Bison prevailing. Adding to the year's success was the nomination of several team members to play on the A-Sun All-Academic team.

Belmont Lipscomb Battle OF THE Boulevard

Photographers, Anthony Estes & Lauren Farris

This year's Battle of the Boulevard proved to be a thrilling evening as the clock ticked down in Allen Arena. While the Bison and the Bruins exchanged the lead several times, Lipscomb became the victor without a second remaining on the clock.

Lady Bison Basketball

13-15

The Lady Bison had another thrilling year on the court. Not all of the excitement was held on the hard court since the Lady Bison's own Kaia Jergenson graduated along with some of her teammates this spring. Underscoring this accomplishment, the Lady Bison also were among the highest academically in the A-Sun Conference. Way to go Lady Bison.

The BaBBLER

A week's worth of news assignments are passed out after Sunday's late night meeting. These are just a few of the first steps to getting the newspaper completed. The previous week's assignments come in Monday and are turned into copy. By adding some pictures, headlines, captions, and a little creativity, the staff brings it all together Tuesday night. The Babler is then distributed on Wednesday evenings. With completing 27 editions plus a Freshman Orientation Edition, the staff is hard at work all year.

Program

The Honors Program, under the direction of Dr. Paul Prill, seeks to intellectually challenge gifted students. By having smaller classes and having students work closely with some of the campus' most gifted professors, these students can better explore the vast world around them.

This program also seeks to forge a relationship among its diverse participants. To accomplish this purpose, several cultural events are planned throughout the academic year such as excursions to see Miss Saigon or trips to hear Dvorak's pieces being performed.

While creating this sense of community, the program is not a place at which people discover themselves but rather to enhance who they already are. Because "to whom much is given much is required," students are encouraged to develop themselves within their specialty. Several students challenge their perspectives by participating in the Vienna Study-Abroad program or by spending a semester at Oxford University. Some undergraduates contribute to ground-breaking research while other scholars present their ideas at both regional and national conferences.

At the close of an honor's experience, there is no specific body of knowledge at which one can announce that he or she has arrived. Rather this person has begun to realize something greater--the ability to ask better and deeper questions. Aristotle once wrote, "We are what we repeatedly do. Excellence, then is not an act but a habit." The Honors Program seeks to make excellence, both in service and in pursuing worthwhile ideas, a way of life.

Service Day

This spring, many Lipscomb students flooded the Nashville streets and businesses. In an effort to improve living conditions of their fellow Nashvillians, each team provided valuable support, making this event the largest, most-successful service project the campus has undertaken.

The Early Music Consort is an ensemble which studies and performs music from the past. The challenge of the consort is to bring to life the music from the Renaissance and Medieval periods as well as the older music from non-Western cultures. Countries represented in the consort's literature in recent years include Albania, Argentina, Bulgaria, China, Crimea, Croatia, Egypt, England, France, Germany, Ghana, Greece, Hungary, India, Iraq, Ireland, Japan, Kenya, Lebanon, Macedonia, Mexico, Netherlands, Nigeria, Portugal, Romania, Scotland, Spain, Turkey, Uganda, Venezuela, Vietnam, Wales and Zimbabwe. Other cultures include the Arabs, Aztecs, Basques, Cheyenne, Pawnees, Huron, Incas, Lakota, Miwok, Sephardic Jews, Sioux, and Yumaris. This literature is important in the history of music, but much of it is rarely performed, especially in the academic setting. Early Music programs which emphasize Renaissance and Medieval music are strong in some large universities especially in New York, New England, and on the West coast, but in most other parts of the country this literature is not performed. None of our sister Christian colleges have such ensembles.

Zambia

Katera Bolander, Brad Ellis, Serena Warmath, Tiffany Pate, Jason Hartlage, and Heath Rogers serve the people of Zambia in many way during their visit in June.

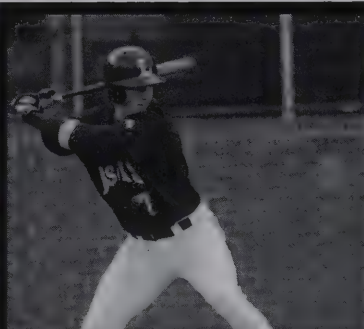

Seven Lipscomb students visited Zambia, Africa for 4 1/2 weeks to participate in various ministries in Namwianga and Nyanga. After meeting with Sam Schewmaker, a Harding missions worker, the group worked in the Namwianga Mission. This mission housed approximately seven schools, an orphanage, a clinic, and Eric's House (a street ministry providing housing for under-privileged children) among other buildings. Here, students lived with mission workers, giving these participants an excellent opportunity to immerse themselves in local culture. The group then traveled farther south to Nyanga with Schewmaker and Wilson (a Zambian school worker) to encourage local church and community leaders. After this visit, the Lipscomb group traveled north to Northreach Mission, a two-week medical mission.

From this experience, this group learned in-depth about the severe need for schools. As a part of One-Life Revolution, these students toured schools and WorldVision projects in order to gain better insight into what is involved with building schools as well as needs associated with this process. The Lipscomb group hopes to use this experience in future endeavors in order to raise funds for educational building development in this poverty-stricken country.

february • ma

Ah! February, March, April, and May. These months are the countdown to another school year's end. With that so aptly put, there are more formals to attend; there are those flowers, chocolates, and whatever else can be given at Valentine's Day; there is screaming your lungs out at the Battle of the Boulevard; there is going on that Spring Break Mission trip; there is attending the Early Music Consort's recital in the Parthenon. Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors elect new members to the SGA, and clubs make plans for next semester, and a much needed new roommate is found. Seniors pack their rooms for the last time and anticipate that first and final walk across the graduation stage. The future's promise never seemed to be so bright!

Track & Field

The Lady Bison had a packed schedule this season. Even with demanding meets and academic obligations, these ladies had one of the highest academic records for their division, making them as effective on the track as they were in the classroom. The team visited the A-Sun championship in Orlando, Florida where they finished a strong 9th. With their performance at this event, they broke several school records. Several team members ran their personal best. Way to go Lady Bison!

Many Thanks, Dr. Flatt

Dr. Steve Flatt, a 1977 graduate and Lipscomb's 16th president, closed his tenure as president to serve as National Healthcare's senior vice-president for development. While here, he helped organize Lipscomb's departments into five colleges, added the Vanderbilt Nursing Partnership and the Raymond B. Jones School of Engineering, and helped to better campus-wide curriculum. Dr. Flatt served the faculty, students, and community well. While everyone wishes him the best, Dr. Flatt will be sincerely missed.

Study Abroad in London

The London program affords students an opportunity to study in one of the world's most interesting and diverse cities. In previous years, Lipscomb students have received internships with the Labor party as well as with other prestigious institutions. This year, these travelers studied with Dr. Lee Camp who developed a new course which combined British history with a uniquely and radically-different Christian perspective.

Thursday, July 7, 2005

Hours after London was named host city for the 2012 Summer Olympics, an al-Qaida-spawned terrorist group blasted three subway entrances and shreaded a double-decker bus. Emergency crews responded quickly but were slowed by massive damage. Prime Minister Tony Blair, making a return trip from the G-8 Summit in Gleneagles, Scotland, surveyed the damage. He concluded that these barbaric attacks would neither dampen British resolve to fight international acts of terror nor inverte London mentality.

Cartoonist's humor is fearless

Lipscomb student has no qualms about race, other issues in award-winning comic strip

By Nicole Garton, Staff Writer

Nate Creekmore finds humor where others find offense. Perhaps it's a necessity born from 22 years of people trying to figure out how to categorize him: Black? Hispanic? Middle Eastern? He's actually half black, half white, and you can use whatever word you choose for that, he says. To himself, he's just Nate, an aspiring cartoonist at Lipscomb University who thinks ethnic differences are too often made into mountains when they should be molehills. That's why he's not afraid to address them – and especially to poke fun at the way people deal with them – in his comic strip, Maintaining, which he pens twice a week for the student newspaper.

The strip features Marcus, a biracial high school student, and the social issues he faces in his day-to-day life.

"I think there's a lot of humor in racial issues, when you think about it," Creekmore says.

With dry and sometimes sly wit, he has dealt with everything from stereotypes and interracial dating (when Marcus shows up for dinner with his white girlfriend's parents, they serve him watermelon and fried chicken) to evolution and racial slurs.

The strip made waves on campus when it debuted in the school paper, The Babbler.

Some called him racist. Some called him enlightened. Either way, he kept them wondering what his characters would say next.

Kyle Gregory, editor-in-chief of The Babbler, says the strip has been good for Lipscomb, a largely white school.

"We don't have the best diversity on campus. For a biracial student to come in here and start talking about racial issues from both sides – I think it opens up people. He's coming from a very lighthearted standpoint. He's not pointing fingers."

The strip has generated buzz off campus as well as on. For the second year in a row, Creekmore has won the Scripps Howard Foundation's national award for college cartooning, a highly competitive category that receives dozens of entries, says president and CEO Judy Clabes.

Winning in two successive years is an extremely rare accomplishment in any of the National Journalism Award categories, she added.

The three-judge panel, which included two professional cartoonists, praised Creekmore for speaking "in his own voice" about racial and ethnic identity and said, "He deals with sensitive subjects with humor and a frank, refreshing openness."

Maintaining also caught the eye of Universal Press Syndicate, which distributes comics such as Doonesbury and Garfield.

The company has offered him a stipend to spend the next year developing the strip. At the end of the year, it will decide whether to add Maintaining to its repertoire.

Man of many worlds

Tall and mellow, with a deadpan face that belies an analytical and sarcastic sense of humor, Creekmore is well-liked and respected on campus, fellow students say.

It's his sense of humor and playful hand, graduate student Holly Cavender believes, that allows him to address touchy subjects such as race and evolution without turning people off.

He likes Kung Fu movies, jazz and drawing caricatures of his professors – but only after grades have been finalized, he emphasizes.

Some of Creekmore's earliest memories involve trying to copy some of his father's artwork. A fan of The Boondocks, Foxtrot, and Calvin & Hobbes, he has long wanted to become a cartoonist.

When he transferred to Lipscomb from a Texas school his sophomore year, he decided to develop a strip of his own. He also decided to write about what he knows, which is why the strip reflects his unique world view. Born in Nebraska to an Air Force family, Creekmore never lived in one place longer than three years. Bouncing around from Germany to Texas to Turkey to North Dakota, he found that people are basically the same everywhere.

He also grew up on military bases, where people lived where they were assigned to live, regardless of race.

"You might live next to somebody that's Mexican or somebody that's white or somebody that's black, and that's just where you have to live. So in the military, for the most part, you kind of figure out how to get along with other people. It's kind of a utopia sometimes, I guess, in that way."

It also served as something as a shield from a lot of the ugliness a biracial family faces.

His parents met in college. She was white. He was black.

"Nobody was happy with the marriage, not my dad's side or my mother's side. For that to work out, it had to be love. For you to be able to give up your whole family to be with this one person, that's love."

By the time Creekmore was born, his mother's family had disowned her, and his father's family had been hurt in ways that would take years to repair.

Because they moved around so much, Creekmore and his four sisters never saw any of their extended family.

He never even realized he had a second set of grandparents until he got a little older, and it occurred to him that his mom must have parents, too.

He doesn't remember asking about them, but he must have. "Basically, I found out that they just hated black people." He still hasn't met them.

Fitting in Growing up black in a predominantly white school can be tough. Growing up biracial in any school can be even harder.

LeJoy Causly, a Lipscomb senior who reads Maintaining, recalls biracial students getting made fun of when she was growing up. "A lot of people are closed-minded about that," she says.

Creekmore attended his share of predominantly white schools and had his share of struggles with fitting in. He wasn't immune to pressure from other African-American teens to listen to the "right" music, wear the "right" clothes and speak a certain way. I think for me it wasn't so much what I was trying to fit into but where I was being accepted more, and that was with blacks. So I was trying to make sure my acceptance there was fine. It wasn't that I necessarily chose that over the other. More like they chose me, I guess."

These days, he takes a color-blind approach to making friends, surrounding himself with people he relates to. And he's amused, rather than offended, when people try in surreptitious ways to determine his ethnicity.

"I know who I am regardless of what the perception of me might be, ethnically. So while it might be easier for me to just go around and say I'm black, I think that would be wrong on my part because I grew up with my mother as well as my father," he says.

"It's sad that you have to choose between the two groups. I don't even think that should be an issue. I have to rise above that stuff. I'm a part of both cultures. I can't be eternally conflicted with myself." Students on campus aren't racist so much as curious about what makes others the way they are, he says, and everyone's struggling to get over the stereotypes they have. He loves it when he sees people of different races hanging out together. He also finds humor in touchy subjects and the verbal dances people sometimes do to avoid them.

"It's hard to start a dialogue with somebody because there's so many things you can't say," Creekmore says.

"Like what word do I use? I don't want to offend anybody. I think that might be why relations are so bad because we don't know how to talk with each other. You can't get offended every time somebody says something. He finds humor in other places, as well, and the strip has developed to become less about social issues, although they're still addressed, and more about the characters and what they face in their daily lives.

"Basically, what I'm trying to say in the strip is people are people. We all basically like the same things. Our differences, to me, are mostly cultural. I don't think it's anything we can't get over. But I don't want to address that in a really syrupy, sappy way." Gregory says The Babblar will sorely miss Creekmore's talent when he graduates this year. At a school paper with few resources, it's been a blessing to have a comic strip that's so well-respected. "Some people love it, some people hate it, but everybody reads it."

In Closing...

Illustrate: (verb) to illuminate; to make clearer by the use of pictures and texts; to explain; to refine.

To illustrate is to give something a better shape--to illuminate its form, making that object more clear to the viewer. Yet, how can one capture the magnitude that any number of years contain? Perhaps, the point is to encourage people to remember--to maintain and to entertain thoughts that they might not otherwise have. In essence, a closing, to well...anything, is more like a pause, a gap between moments when one is asked to consider something more.

Provost's Reception

The Provost's Reception is an evening designed to recognize outstanding student achievement. At Longview Mansion this April, guests heard Dr. Jerry Reed while the Avalon and Novala Trios performed classical pieces. The reception was made possible by the generous donation of Drs. John and Jill Parker. The reception's atmosphere brought a welcomed pause to the semester's hustle and bustle. Both students and faculty celebrated the year's accomplishments and spoke about pursuing graduate work or having landed that great job opportunity. The evening placed a great punctuation to what has been a fantastic year for the Lipscomb family.

Colophon

The theme, "Lipscomb Illustrated," was chosen for this yearbook because of the art of Nate Creekmoore, May 2005 Graduate of Lipscomb University. These drawings represent Creekmoore's and many other students' view of Lipscomb life. Volume 84 of Lipscomb University's Backlog was printed by Herff-Jones Incorporated in Montgomery, Alabama. Mary Harris was the Herff-Jones Representative, and Dr. Randy Bouldin was the Yearbook Staff advisor.

Each spread was designed with Adobe PageMaker 7.0. Layouts were created either by staff members using Adobe PageMaker 7.0 or chosen from Herff-Jones predesigned layouts in "Your Layouts." A 1-inch line was used on most pictures. Pictures were submitted by hard copies or digital pictures. Hard copy photographs were compliments of Backlog Staff members or of university students. A Cannon EOS Digital Rebel 6.3 Mega Pixel was used for digital pictures made by the staff. There were 1600 digital pictures made during the creation of the Backlog. There were 100 hard copy pictures submitted to the yearbook staff for publication. Other pictures were taken by members of the Public Relations of Lipscomb University, Michael's Photography, and university students. Other photographers include Lauren Mitchell, Aimee Wells, Jennifer Placke, Justin Gregory, Rachel Reed, Lauren Farris, Chris Brosey, Kyle Gregory, Sarah Neihls, Natalie Henderson, Anthony Estes, Ashley Call, Margie Roder, and Karen Long. Copy was done by Backlog staff members, Backlog advisor Dr. Randy Bouldin, Mary Emily Bouldin, Kyle Gregory, Kim Chaudoin, The Tennessean, and Rick Graham.

The 2005 Backlog consisted of 224 black and white pages. 2400 copies of the Backlog, Volume 84 was distributed to Lipscomb University Board of Trustees, students, faculty and staff members.
